

Please do not ease the broadcast ownership rules. Local news and events are already not being broadcast. My coworker and I were discussing what to do over the weekend. I suggested he go to the International festival which is held each year in Houston and spotlights a different country per year. He said he hadn't heard about it. I asked him if he didn't listen to the radio. He said he did listen to the radio but the jazz station he listened to did not play any local news or events. I then realized the jazz station is probably based out of Cincinnati and has never heard of the Houston International Festival. How sad that we don't even know what is going on in our own cities. Please remember the airwaves belong to the people, not the media corporations. The media corporations might not care about what is going on in our cities, but we do.
